Efficiently Reacting to Market Developments in 2006

- Main concerns expressed by market participants in early 2006 were in relation to volatility and imbalances in the Icelandic economy
- Although some topical issues were based on misconceptions that were effectively redressed through improved and proactive communications, certain concerns were warranted and Landsbanki implemented several strategic measures to address them
 - Reduced market risk from 4-5% to well below 3% of total assets
 - Diversified funding and reduced reliance on market funding – radically increasing deposits
 - Emphasis on integration and consolidation of operations
 - Clarified ownership issues including clear division of hedged positions
- Furthermore, steps were taken to strengthen foundation for Landsbanki's continued organic growth
 - Tier 1 capital increased boosting Capital Adequacy Ratios
 - Pre-funding of 2007 completed and liquidity strengthened
 - Enhanced quality and transparency of information disclosure

Turning Points in 2006

Benign Overall Operating Environment Going Forward

- The outlook in all Landsbanki's international operating markets looks stable and favorable
 - All large industrial economies appear to be approaching trend level growth rates
 - Prospects in securities market appear to be good even though equity prices are expected to rise less in 2007 than in 2006
 - Some corrections could take place in real estate prices in a number of countries
 - Limited impact on Landsbanki as exposure to these markets is conservative
 - Dynamism associated with healthy growth rates in the international economy will have a favorable impact on Landsbanki business in all areas of financial services
- The risks associated with the Icelandic economy in early 2006 have dissipated
 - Economic growth will be slightly lower in Iceland in short-term than in past years but still showing healthy growth rates
 - Assets prices in Iceland and the ISK exchange rate have adjusted down to sustainable levels without any disturbance, neither in real economy nor in the financial system.
 - Adjustment of present external imbalances expected to take place in 2007 – 2008 without significant impact on household or corporate balance sheets

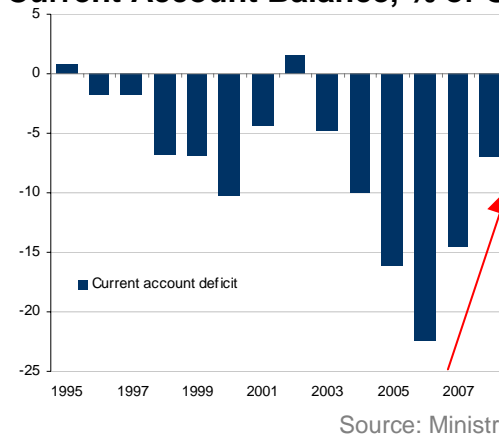

Economic Consolidation in Iceland Proceeding According to Schedule

- Following strong growth in 2003-2006, consolidation is expected in 2007
- Major components of domestic demand will decline in real terms
- Investment demand on the other hand will decline rapidly as energy-intensive investments come to a close
- As domestic demands falls and new export capacity is activated, the current external imbalance will diminish
- A sustainable current account balance will be reached next year

Growth in private consumption & investment

Current Account Balance, % of GDP

ISK Correction Behind Us – Inflation Targets Within Reach

- Correcting existing misalignment in 2004 - 2005, the ISK depreciated sharply by 20% in early 2006
- The adjustment process is now completed and current position of the ISK is close to it's long-term equilibrium
- Short-term fluctuations are likely to persist as the current adjustment runs it's full course
- Good medium-term prospects and an attractive carry should, however, put an appreciating pressure on the ISK over the longer term
- The outlook in 2008 is for inflation close to the CB's 2.5% inflation target or just above given the overall macroeconomic balance
- Concurrently, policy stance will loosen and policy rates will come down

Exchange Rate Forecast –ISK TWI

Inflation forecast

Short and Medium Term Outlook

- Following exceptional growth of 7-8% per annum in 2004-05, GDP growth in 2006 and 2007 is now estimated at 2.5%
- Fears of an economic melt-down following ISK correction last year, now look a bit overstated
- As the economy gathers phase next year GDP growth will be back on track close to long term potential of around 3%
- The likelihood of further large scale foreign investment projects will lead strong GDP growth in 2008-2010
